NEIGHBORS RIDE MAN ON RAIL TO WIND UP VILLAGE TRAGEDY

Case Concerns a Spinster, a Town Love Affair, a Baby,
Two Deaths and the Man Who Got the Rail Ride.
—Villagers Wouldn't Stand His Game.

East Troy, Wis., May 19.—Mrs. Barney Ward is dead and so is her baby, and yesterday the villagers organized a committee and rode Barney Ward out of town on a rail just a few days after his wife and baby died.

Mrs. Ward wasn't pretty, and no one ever thought much about her marrying. She was 30 and had worked in a store for ten years, saved money and bought a home for her parents.

In the village they regarded her as an old maid, too old to even dream of lovers again, much less receive the attention of any.

She attended church on Sunday; she belonged to the bible class. She was drab and a spinster.

Then Barney met, wooed and won her. The romance of it and the glory of it wrecked all of the caution the years might have been expected to teach her. She gave Barney first her love and then herself.

Of course, she expected Barney would marry her, but he did not want to get married, for he worked in-
